In December, 1923, after 13 months of office, Benito Mussolini took the initiative of bringing together, under Government auspices, the two major organizations, repre senting the employers (the General Confederation of Italian Industries) and the workers (the Confederation of Fascist Trade Unions). This gave rise to the formation of a joint comssion consisting of an equal number of representatives of both bodies mutual collaboration.

Trade Union Monopoly Since then these organizations have greatly strengthened their respective positions and can now speak with undisputed authority on behalf of the interests they represent. On Oct. 2, 1925, they mutually recognized each other as the only authorized representatives of employers and workers for the negotiation of collective trade agreements on wages and conditions of labor throughout Italy. Wet Move Is Met With Curt Replies or Renewed Pledges to Stand by Prohibition-Fails to Make Impression With Officials in Many Cities

A nation-wide appeal by the City Council of Milwaukee to American municipalities, asking them to join in petitioning Congress to legalize the sale of wine and beer, has failed. The appeal was contained in resolutions adopted Feb. 15 and sent to cities of 10,000 population and over.

Allowing sufficient time for the resolutions to reach their destinations and be acted upon, THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR followed with a canvass through its correspondents and city officials, asking for a report on any action taken Although the preamble of the resolution painted a picture of an "era

PLEA FOR PEACE

which wove the European countries into opposition and aggression.

Democracy, Mr. Owen declared in substance, does not want war, and would not be led into it were it not for the secret conspiracies of a few

"The discussion of the causes of the war should not be diverted into stigmatizing individuals," he urged. What the world needs is to remember that the spirit of militarism and imperialism led to the war by intrigues, through secret treaties and by secret diplomacy. If the diplomacy of Europe had been wide open, this war could not have happened, and the President of the United States in laying down the conditions of peace on the 14 points showed exceeding wisdom in declaring against secret diplomacy, and demanding open diplomacy. The peace of Europe requires not only a will to peace, but a will to open international intercourse, based on justice common sense and truth.

"It is convenient to put the control of foreign affairs in an executive office where the records are kept and preserved and known, but it is dangerous to give control over Louis, Chattanooga, Tacoma, Seattle, foreign affairs to a foreign office Spokane, Saginaw, Mich., Lowell, without parliamentary supervision. Defect in French System

> "The structure of the French Government has this defect, and this is largely true of the British Foreign Office. The world has much to be thankful for. The militaristic dynas-ties have been overthrown, and 55 nations have now assembled in Geneva, pledged to international co-operation on the basis of justice. The United States is not only committed to these fundamental principles, but was responsible for the establishment of the system at Geneva.

Parliament Wishes to Get Rid of Finance Bill-Common Ground Sought

PARIS. March 27—A ministerial council, a meeting of the leaders of groups and the convocation of the Pinance Commission was held for the purpose of discovering a compromise. With the franc slipping quickly below 29 to the dollar and 141 to the pound, the doctrinal dis-141 to the pound, the doctrinal disputations in which the Radicals and Socialists have engaged themselves with the Government for months seem particularly inopportune. The deputies are conscious that if there is a catastrophe, they will incur heavy responsibilities. Were Aristide Briand, the Prime Minister, again to fall before the finance bill is passed, its effect unquestionable would be further depreciation of the franc and the renewal of a similar proposal by

Such an absurd game cannot con tinue for an indefinite period. There is a strong movement in Parliament to finish with the finance bill, and to postpone the crisis until a moment when it will not especially in-jure French credit. But even with this desire, it is difficult for the depu ties and ministers to find common

The Finance Commission is en deavoring to substitute for the sales tax an increased tax on the transferrence of property. The proposal applies to land, buildings and shares, but a deficit will still be left which will have to be covered by the sales tax. But it is hoped to disguise the sales tax by giving it still another name and restricting it to wholesale and what is called semiwholesale hases. Presumably it is a tax on goods, at whatever point it is ap-plied. Many good observers believe that further cabinet changes cannot be avoided, in spite of the growing consciousness of the need of an

Racing Beach is a location admired for years by the summer residents as combining everything to be desired in a location for their summer home. It has been, however, until now held as a part of the Estate of the late Charles R. Whittemore, who persistently refused to sell any part of it.

In addition to the natural advantages bestowed by nature on Racing Beach, good gravel surfaced roads have been built, town water (second to none in the State) is being piped through large mains to all parts of the property, electric lighting service is available for every home. Every improvement has been added to nature's already most perfect work to insure the residents at Racing Beach a pleasant location. Bathing in the warm waters of Buzzards Bay on the sands of Racing Beach (for residents only), yachting along interesting and ever changing shores (a fine boat anchorage is available at Quissett Harbor near by), motofing over fine state roads, golf at numerous interesting Cape Cod courses are some of the pleasures to be enjoyed at Racing Beach.

New England and the country at large are producing too much for the present rate of consumption, Mr. Dr. Schacht, Chief of German Filene said, and the remedy lies in encouraging consumption to keep pace. By applying to all industry the methods used successfully by Henry Ford-payment of higher while reducing selling price—buying power will be so increased as to stabilize industry and ward off overproduction.

Minimum Wage An essential first step is the estab-stroying super-competition. minimum wage question standpoint, but from the standpoint of business success and profits. Industry in the United States is emerging from a pioneer stage of pro-duction and distribution during duction and which stage it has become a dogma that business profits depend on lower costs of production obtained through a reduction in the wage scale. This argument cannot be maintained under present conditions, he said, and the reverse is more nearly correct. The remedy for high costs of production does not lie in lower wages, he said, since the maintenance of finally depends on the buying power of the population, made up largely of wage earners. Public Buying Power

It is clear, he said, that if the standard of wages is too low, the buying power of the public will be SWEDISH NAVY BAND destroyed. As an example of this, he pointed to critical conditions in Germany, due in large part to the lack of consuming power of the 70,000,000 people, whose average wages does

As a result of the great productive power of the United States and New England, Mr. Filene said that difficult times lie ahead for business and industry. With the restoration of Europe's economic power, there will be even greater competition in world markets. These conditions may be met, he said, by introducing ore mass production and distribution, which will make possible higher wages and lower prices. Adoption of mass methods by New England producers is basically essential, Mr. Filene said, if New England is to regain its former position of industrial leadership. By t'e ap plication of such methods, high wages and low prices will be possible, and with the resultant great purchasing power, production will expand and prosperity abound.

for the future, Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant, told the Council of Women and Children in Industry at Reichsbank, Says It Would Mean New Inflation .

By Special Cable BERLIN, March 27-The revalu ation of inflation and pre-inflation money was rejected by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichslishment of an adequate minimum bank as an impossibility at the genwage, Mr. Filene said, since the ba- eral meeting of the Reichsbank. Not sis of consumptive power is in the less than 128,000,000,000 gold marks worker. He contended that failure would be needed, he said to revalue to understand this fact and make alone a certain class of 1000 mark provision for the necessary industrial reorganization which would was against coining gold money at guarantee a substantial minimum present and added that those who wage would lead to social and industrial disturbances, and to profit-deand obtain gold for them in America. In the meantime the Reichstag's tax committee has decreased the tax should be approached, he said, not reductions planned by the Minister only from the ethical and human of Finance in conjunction with the standpoint but from the standpoint chancellor for this year, in order to help industry revive, from 550,000,000 gold marks intended by the Government, to about 450,000,000, thus en abling the government to collect about 100,000,000 marks more taxes than it originally wanted this year. Industry, it is said in political circles, does not revive as speedily as expected, and the Government, moreover, needs money, since the prolonged period during which the un-employed is entitled to receive doles has been extended to 39 weeks. The wine tax is entirely abolshed, the increase of the beer tax postponed production and profitable markets and the turnover tax and the tax on industrial fusions lowered. The demanded reduction of the sugar tax is impossible at present, because it is mortgaged for payments to the agent-general of reparations.

Value of Collection More Than $1000 Valuation of the collection is considerably more than $1000, for each separate article in it is a work of art. Further importance is given to it as making what is supposedly the first time that a group of Japanese citizens has co-operated unofficially with a group of American citizens in an international affair. The story of how it came about is as interesting mas are the dolls.

Miss Jessie M. Sherwood, a business woman of Boston, former secretary of the Boston Japan Society, had occasion some months ago to write a prominent Japanese gentleman in Osaka, Japan. Without premeditation and with no realization of the magnitude of her request she spoke of these festival dolls and asked if he could not send her some to be used in promoting friendly re-lations between the people of the two countries. Afterward, amazed at herself for what she had done, she wrote to a personal friend, living in Osaka, asking him to be sponsor for her and her request. Osaka is a con-servative and cultured city, a few miles from Kyoto, to which business men commute. It appeared that her appeal could not have gone to one better fitted to comply with it.

Japanese Chizens Raise Money So it came about that a group of Japanese citizens raised the money, collected the dolls and furniture and with an elaborate farewell ceremony held over them by school children started them on their way to Boston. On that occasion an address on American-Japanese relations was delivered by a little girl. Miss Yoshie Yamashita, as a member of the Kyoto Young Women's Buddhist Association. In the course of it she

The Fascist, or national corporations, founded by the syndi-calist Edmondo Rossoni, quite independently of the Fascist moveent, by which they were absorbed in June, 1922, came last in the field. when Socialism was already defeated, and the prestige of the Socialist unions was already in decline on account of their attitude in the political strikes.

According to published figures, last September the Fascist trade unions had a membership of 1,800,000, against only 500,000 in 1922. To this multiplicity of trade unions the Fascist state has put a finish, not by abolishing any existing unions, but by according legal recognition to type of union only, and making all effective action on the part of any union dependent on such recoglaid down for such recognition can only be fulfilled by the Fascist cor-

It will thus be seen that since no other trade unions stand a chance of being recognized, membership in them me a mere burden without ers, rather than go unrepresented by remaining in their old unions, will surely enter the Fascist syndicates. It should be further pointed out that associations of civil servants, of military forces or of persons in the employ of local govern-ment authorities are forbidden.

Having thus secured syndical unity, the next step of the Fascist Government was to see that the recognized unions of workers and emprosperity Italy has enjoyed during so that their work might harmonize should in no case lead to strikes or lockouts, harmful to the national interests and public services. The court also issues binding decisions regarding all questions arising out of contracts already concluded, and one of the duties of the new magistracy is to see that the labor contracts duly made by officially organized unions are fully executed, as vell as to draw up new contracts when the validity of the old ones comes to an end.

An employer who locks out his men is liable to a penalty of from three months' to a year's imprison-ment and a fine of from 15,000 to 100,000 lire. Employees, who by agreement leave work or act so as to disturb its continuity and reg-ularity, are liable to imprisonment from one to three months. Leaders, promoters and organizers of such breaches of the law are liable to imprisonment with solitary confinement for not less than one year and not more than two years and a fine of from 2000 to 50,000 lire. Civil servants who go on strike or disturb work in their offices by agreed ac-tion are similarly liable to imprisonment with solitary confinement and loss of civic rights. Moreover, in the of a strike any civil servant "does not do his utmost" to insure the regularity or restoration of a public service is liable to imprison-ment for from one to six months.

Socialist Control Obviated One might, perhaps, think that the monopoly granted to the Fascist trade unions will eventually modify the character of the l'ascist organizations, since the rank and file of the Fascist corporations might be filled with workmen of distinct Socialist tendencies, and the contrary effect aimed at by such a novel scheme would ultimately be obtained, namely that the Fascist trade unions would in reality be controlled by Socialists who would not hesitate to throw off the Fascist yoke at the right moment.

No such fear should, however, be entertained, for the Government has carefully determined that the organizations remain under its direct control, the Government having the right to replace the managers of both the employers' and workers' unions by nominees of its own. The Minister of the Interior, indeed, has to approve the appointment of the president and secretary of the associations by whom these are directed and administered, and may at any time withdraw his approval. He is further empowered to dissolve the executive committee of both types of associations and concentrate in the hands of their president or other Government nominee their whole management

ASKS RAILROADS TO SHARE BRIDGE

Port Authority Would Route New York Central Over Hell Gate Span

Special from Monitor Bufeau

NEW YORK, March 27 - Wider utilization of the facilities of the Hell Gate Bridge, declared to be in the public interest, are sought in a case brought by the Port of New York Authority to compel the Penn-sylvania and New Haven railroads, joint owners of the bridge, to share it with the New York Central. The question is being heard by Interstate Commerce Commissioners and the Public Service Commission, as it is both an intrastate and an interstate matter.
The owners of the bridge, which, with accessories, represents an investment of more than $30,000,000, assert that a compulsory order to share these facilities with a competitor would tend to discourage railroads from expending their dwn funds in the future to provide new gateways, which, ultimately, they might have to share with companies which did not contribute toward the expense. Payment for the use of these is not equal to the advantage received the roads assert. The New York Central is an unwilling recipient of the advantages which the Port Auhtority, in its comprehensive plan for the better handling of freight into New York City, seeks to give it. Its position is that the number of freight cars between 50 and 100 a day-which would use this route to and from shippers in Queensborough, Long Island, is not of sufficient importance to upset it; present arrangements. It was the great steadiness of the phlegmatic Hollander that gave him the victory in the final game, as it had in most of his other matches. Nothing disturbed Bos' balance and this seemed to have its effect on his opponent, Matsuyama, whose performance was far below his recent play. All season there has been only one reason for the success of Pere Mar-quette in the E. A. H. A. race and the same reason was expected to be their sole hope for last night and that has been combination. Against the Uni-corn, when they should have produced steady team work, there was none and individually the winners were greatly superior. Once again George Owen Jr. stood out prominently and through his fine play Clark Hodder, left wing, was also brought into prominence and scored two goals on passes from Owen and a third unassisted. Hodder had his eye on the net all night and his shot was straight and true for the corners. Had he been shooting as well all season, his scoring average would have mounted rapidly for Owen has fed him frequently; but he has not been able to Hodder took a pass from Owen to open the scoring half way through the second period and gathered his other two goals in the second session. FERE SHARL BOUCEtte Hodder, lw....rw, Nelson, Doucette

Although hockey interest has war eriously since the close of the National Hockey League season here and exhibition professional games have been rather dull, Boston hockey fans were pleasantly surprised by the Port-land Rosebuds, who not only defeated hte strengthened Bruins 2 to 1 last night, but did so at eastern rules. The only previous impression Hub City fans had of western hockey was scoring a 7-to-0 victory.

The Trojans showed a marked imthat obtained from watching the few players wh tried out for the Bruins from the western teams, and that impression was not very high until last night's performance. No hockey team to visit the Arena this season created a more favorable impression. The visitors had tall, big men, with the ex-ception of one, and they combined speed, exceptional stick handling and mbination into their play throughbut the right.

Bodychecking was not employed and tial and showed quite clearly the dif-ference between the West and East in hockey. Since abolishing bodying on the forward line in the West stick-handling has become more of an art apparently, for these westerners out-shone the Bruins at it. Time and again one, two and three men broke clear of the Boston defense and although he Important changes in the standing of the six contenders cannot now be made. Layton, a former champion, is sure of second place, where he finished in a tie last year. A. H. Kieckhefer of Chicago, another former winner, is sure of third place, and the same assurance is presented by the players in other positions.

P. E. Maupome of Cleveland is on the road next week, visiting Kieckhefer the first three days. Maupome is getting ready to go back to Mexicoblast in the United States league. There are a few postponed games to be redated.

The only complaint heard against two and three men broke clear of the Boston defense and although he had no need to do so, Dr. Charles E. Stewart in the local goal was the greatest barrier Portland faced, and he did a remarkable job in goal.

Lehman, Vancouver goalle, was radical in movements, leaving his net often, but he could teach every eastern goalle something about passing the puck to his own players for a jump up the ice. Both men were a study and could hardly have done any better. Miss Brooks, Her Opponent, Put Up a Great Battle

PINEHURST, N. C., March 27-Although having only a year of tournament play Miss Jane Brooks, of the Rockland Country Club, Nyack, N. Y., put up a great battle against Miss Glenna Collett, United States title-holder, in the first round of the North and South women's golf championship here yesterday. The margin was 6 and 5, but did not represent the play of Miss Brooks.

At the fifth the Nyack girl was 1 up on the champion. They halved the cathedral hole in par 3. At the seventh Miss Brooks should have had an easy half, but tossed the chance away with a missed putt through newcomers.

After this Miss Collett had things her own way. She reached the turn 2 up and won the tenth, eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth. Other well-known golfers among the victors were Miss Beatrice Wall of Oshkosh, Miss Louise Forydee of Youngstown, and Miss Helen Payson of Portland. Miss Edith Quier of Reading, Berthellyn Cup titleholder, had a close match against Miss A. L. Reading, Berthenyn Cup thenouer, had a close match against Miss A. L. Beadlestone, winning 2 and 1.

It fell to the lot of Miss Wall to eliminate the most consistent Pinehurst winner of the present year, Mrs. John D. Chapman of Greenwich. Miss Wall won by 4 and 3. The summary:

readings of these memoirs is akin to strolling down some peaceful, sun-flecked country lane far re-moved from the clangor of presentday New York, with its traffic road, its babel of many tongues, its stifling fumes from serried ranks of impatient, honking motors. Culling the mple flowers of the authors' memories the reader almost regrets the vanished years when people were not too busy to be courteous; when a me was the rule and not the exception; and when the gentle art of friendship was understood and prac-

Early Dinner Hours

Mrs. Wright, the daughter of a Unitarian minister, tells of her childhood home in Amity Place, a by-street of Washington Square, convenient to her father's church on Broadway opposite Waverly Place. Washington Square, then known as Washington Parade, was used variously as a park, playground and, later, as training camp for the militia. About the north and west sides of the Square was a colony of substantial people living in the ample, cheerful brick houses which still stand there today. Then, except for great functions, dinner was later than 2 o'clock, the men coming uptown for it and returning their offices afterward. Even as late as 1873, an invitation to a formal dinner read: "At 6 o'clock."

Fifth Avenue was a serious place wherein to walk decorously in one's best clothes: the favorite promenade ending at the big stone reservoir at Forty-second Street. Sixth Avenue boasted two types of horse-cars. The so-called long car had a front and a rear platform with both a driver and a conductor, and was drawn by two horses. The short car had only a rear platform and a single horse and was manned by a driver who, in addition to making change, released the strap that held the flap door when a passenger got on or off. This made for nimbleness on the part of the rider.

evidently the work of one of those writers whom, Mr. Shaw declares, our newspapers keep in a special cage in the basement-one searched the columns for a more cheerful sub-Hampstead author should do well to ject, such as the coal subsidy or the French debt. This quest unexpectedly confirmed Francis Bacon's dictum that adversity is not without comforts and hopes.

One read, for example, that "Revue to admit, however, that these remaining supports still have some kicks left in them. This was followed by Sir Harry Lauder's assurable to the street of the ance, perhaps a little needless, that no comedian can live and thrive in an atmosphere of beauty choruses and jazz orchestras; he obviously overlooked the fact that these supply, consciously or unconsciously, their own comedy. Then came the interesting news through Mr. Luigi Pesaresi, whose firm has been mak-ing piano-organs in Clerkenwell for 50 years, that there are not more than about three or four Italian organ-grinders left in London. Pass-ports are refused them from Italy on the ground that their performances derogate from the dignity of their own country. Here is a hopeful precedent that might with advantage be followed by other countries, and extended to other classes of musical performers.

Melba Hopeful Last and not least of these "comforts and hopes" was a letter from Melba, who is now busy saying good-by up and down the English provinces. She finds almost everywhere a quickening in musical appreciation, and thinks that the secret of this new interest is to be found mainly in the astonishing enlargement of the audience for music accomplished by the gramophone and radio, "certainly the two most eloquent missionaries to the musical heathen in our midst."

Surely, one function of the critic should be not the disparagement but the encouragement of this new and rapid development of European music. Although it may be true that our best music today represents merely the tastes of an infinitesimal minority, every new listener means a lessening of that which Herman Bahr once called "the infamous 'everydayness'" of our civilization. For this reason one notes with some interest the increasing demand in ondon for musical plays and musical comedies.

The latest revolt against jazz and revue is "Mr. Pepys," a ballad opera by Clifford Bax, with music by Martin Shaw. Produced at the Every-man Theater, Hampstead, by the new managers, George Carr, Raymond Massey and Allan Wade, "Mr. Pepys" has proved so popular that it being transferred to a West End able, for instance, that Ernst Krenek theater, the Royalty. The Puppet-Show Song "Some of the music I liked mightily, although the composer pretends at being old-fashioned and uses too many concords. But that, that pleased me most in the opera was the song sung at the puppet-show on the outskirts of Bartholomew Fayre, it being sung over and over again to the pleasure of us all. I shall make my wife learn it and sing it to me. On Feb. 12, 1666, my friend, T. Killigrew, who hath gone times, eight or ten times, to Rome to hear good musique, so much he loves it, though he never did sing or play a note, told me that he hath ever endeavored in the late King's time, and in this, to introduce good mu-sique, but he never could do it, there never having been any musique here better than ballads. NEW YORK, March 27 (Special)
—During the greater part of the week the selling of stocks went forward on such a large scale that the daily turnover on the New York Stock Exchange was well in excess of 2,000,000 shares. While severe losses had to be faced by the speculators who unfortunately had bought stocks at much higher prices, the pronounced downward movement went on from day to day without special comment or apprehension in speculative and banking circles.

There was a notable absence of the unpleasant rumors which ordinarily are in circulation at such time. Prominence was given to the heavy selling and heavy losses in the daily accounts of operations in the financial district. Probably this attitude was due chiefly to a realization on the part of well-informed interests that, as has been pointed out in this column before in recent weeks, the chief reasons for the further downward movement were to be found in the stock market itself. If they had existed outside of it, then there would have been cause for more general and genuine apprehension. While it was true that some timid observers, whose losses had been particularly heavy, were inclined to think that the stock market was discounting unfavorable developments from three to six months in advance, this idea was not entertained in leading banking circles.

Business on Sound Basis

There was a disposition on the part of some observers to attribute the fresh break in stocks to reports of a material falling off in various important lines of business. Undoubtedly there has been a slowing down in those lines, and perhaps in others. stock was too high at 386½, and likewise too low at 292. In his opinion it should sell somewhere between 325 and 350. This incident is related simply to give an idea to timid holders of first-class securities of what those familiar with the position of those securities, and of the companies which they represent, think about their true value.

Correcting Over-Speculation

The real trouble with the stock market recently has been the outcome of stocks being carried far beyond their true value. Loans were over-extended to a greater extent than was realized. It cannot be made too plain or emphatic that the liquidation of actual stock has been the result chiefly of the necessity of correcting the overspeculation and over-estimation of values, and the reduction of loans, in order that the stock market may be on a stable basis again.

The extent to which it will recover will depend upon the attitude of the people interested in the securities and in the stock market, upon the outlook for business and actual earnings, upon developments at Washington and in the stock market, upon the outlook for business and actual earnings, upon developments at Washington and in the stock market, upon the outlook for business and actual earnings, upon developments at Washington and in the stock market, upon the outlook for business and actual earnings, upon developments at Washington and in the stock market, upon the outlook for business and actual earnings, upon developments at Washington and in the stock market, upon the outlook for business and actual earnings, upon developments at Washington and in the stock market, upon the outlook for business and actual earnings, upon developments at washington and in the stock market, upon the outlook for business and actual earnings, upon developments at Washington and in the stock market, upon the outlook for business and actual earnings, upon developments at washington and in the stock market may be on a stable development at washington and in the stock market may be on a stable served the sto

High Money Rates a Factor

Quite likely the speculation in stocks was adversely affected this week to some degree by the unexpectedly high rates for call money. The payment of demand loans was called for on a larger scale than had been predicted. It was estimated that on a single day loans were called to the extent of from $30,000,000 to $35,000,000. The loaning rate was carried to 514 single day loans were called to the extent of from $30,000,000 to $35,000,000. The loaning rate was carried to 5½ per cent, but both Thursday afternoon and yesterday afternoon an easier tendency was in evidence. While loans were renewed at 5 per cent yesterday the loaning rate dropped to 4½ per cent in the afternoon, although it was the last day of this week for arranging accommodations, and although only three full days remain in this month for making preparations for the large April 1 disbursements.

After they are over, lower rates for money are expected by most authorities. The decrease of $81,000,000 in brokers' loans for the last week, as reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board, while not as large as has been predicted in some circles, nevertheless helped materially to bring down the total from the peak of a short time ago. A shrinkage of $240,000,000 has been effected within the last two weeks alone.

STOCKS REACT IN AN ACTIVE SHORT SESSION

Prices Again Turn Weak and Substantial Net Losses Recorded

NEW YORK, March 27 (A)—Aggres-dive short selling, coupled with an-ther flood of liquidating sales, turned stock prices sharply downward again today, with a number of merchandising, food and public utility issues depressed to new low levels for the today, with a number of merchandising, food and public utility issues depressed to new low levels for the year.

Selling was of an urgent character in many instances, and numerous losses of three to eight points resulted. The reaction started with a break of eight points in General Asphalt, and quickly spread to other industrial shares which were unable to command immediate support.

United States Steel fell back to 120%, but later recovered to 121%, and extreme declines of 4 to 6 points were registered by Woolworth, General Electric, Loose-Wiles Biscuit, du Pont, Famous Players, National Department, Stores, Ward Baking issues, Kresge, United States Cast Iron Pipe and Radio.

With the exception of Atlantic Coast Line, which sagged six points, railroad shares offered stubborn resistance to selling pressure. Their steadiness caused active short covering in the late trading which lifted some of the weaker industrials a point or more from their early lows.

The closing was heavy. Total sales approximated 1,000,000 shares.

Foreign exchanges opened firm, Demand sterling ruled steady around $4.85%, and French francs were slightly higher around 3.45½c.

With additional supplies of money attracted to the New York market by the recent stiffening of rates, traders were enabled to carry on constructive operations in the bond market today, but buying interest still remained at a low ebb.

Chesapeake & Ohio convertible 5s rallied 2 points, leading a moderate advance in the rails, and miscellaned at a low ebb.

Chesapeake & Ohio convertible 5s rallied 2 points, leading a moderate advance in the rails, and miscellaned at a low ebb.

Foreign obligations were subjected to renewed selling pressure. The latest plunge of the French franc had a depressing influence on this country's municipal and railroad bonds try's municipal and railroad bonds fairly steady. Liberty bonds were irregular.

ENGLAND'S LARGEST TRUST

A Living Trust for Your Son

Advantages of a Living Trust

- 1. Becomes effective immediately.
- 2. Relief from care. 3. A flexible form of trust.
- 4. Income tax often lowered. 5. Income payable
- regularly.

6. Supervision of investments.

RECOMMEND that you set aside securities, the income from which will be sufficient to provide for your son's personal expenses, education and business training. You can place these securities in a Living Trust, naming the OLD COLONY TRUST COMPANY trustee."

Every man with a son, wife, or daughter, requiring a regular allowance, will find that a living trust is very satisfactory. Unnecessary friction that often develops over the family money question is eliminated and the individual receiving such income enjoys a new sense of pride and responsibility.

Living Trusts can now be established without incurring the penalty of a Gift Tax.

Such trusts may be started with a moderate amount and additions made from time to time.

Our folder, "LIVING TRUSTS," discusses this form of trust in a manner that is easily understood and directly to the point

Technical Position in Wheat Improved-Smaller Argentine Crop Expected

CHICAGO, March 27 (Special)— Wheat prices showed a good recov-ery for the week, after a period of rather drastic liquidation which im-proved the technical position of the market, leaving it in shape to respond to moderate buying support.

market, leaving it in shape to respond to moderate buying support.

Foreign markets showed a firmer tendency, and with European statis-ticians admitting finally that the Ar-gentine crop was much smaller than supposed, the situation in general takes on a different color.

Apparently it has been the policy of foreign market experts to give the European buyers' side all the benefits of what doubts there have been in regard to the crop yields in various European crop yields were looked upon with the greatest optimism, and Broomhall, the English statistician, aintained that Argentina had raised 140,000,000 bushels of wheat for export or more. Now he confirms the esti-mates of American experts in essential features, by stating the crop in that country only permits of 110,000,000 bushels for export.

This is particularly significant in view of the fact that so much of the Australian surplus has gone to non-European countries. The Canadian surplus is admittedly large, and is the bulwark of the European buyers. There is no great stock of wheat Contract stocks at Chicago are very

Contract stocks at Chicago are very small, and the short position is extremely vulnerable. Leading longs, however, have been left in a state of uncertainty owing to the possibility of, being placed in the position of having to unload arbitrarily later on. There has been persistent buying of Winnipeg wheat for May and July delivery, while the Chicago bull leaders have been inclined to be cautious. Liverpool recently has shown a Liverpool recently has shown a firmer tone, and the impression prevails that whatever surplus Canada has will be needed the next five onths, or before another Canadian

Crop news is decidedly favorable. and draws the line of distinction between the May and the July and later deliveries at Chicago. However, the bears admit that it is much too early to count the bushels. Kansas has a present prospect of 200,000,000 bushels.
Corn has rallied moderately, following further heavy liquidation.
Oats are in a position where bear news has lost its effect, while big stocks preclude any particular bull Rye would be in a position to respond quickly to any buying, if even a moderate export business developed, prices are extremely low compared

MARKET OPINIONS

Hayden, Stone & Co., Boston: Rallies will of course occur in the stock market from time to time, possibly of considerable proportions. These recoveries represent a technical feature incident to every broad downward movement, as occasional reactions are incident to each major bull movement. The stock market, however, is not engaged primarily in righting a technical condition, but in readjusting stock prices to the point where they bear a reasonable relation to earnings and earning prospects.

But we believe that the pros-pect favors a falling off in business activity, and the trend of stock prices is undisputably toward lower levels.

Elmer H. Bright & Co., Boston: Judging from the fact that both bull and bear markets are usually carried to extremes, it can be seen that even present prices do not represent the amount of deflation that might yet take place before the market rights itself and recent speculative excesses have been corrected.

1711 North Center Street, Terre Haute, Ind. The main portion of his letter follows:
"The amplification characteristic curve of the Rauland Lyric shows a double curve and serves as an ideal connection between second detector and amplifier. If anyone feels the expense too great, the three auto-formers can be used. In this case a 200 turn-choke coil wound on one-inch wood spool should be inserted between 'P' terminals of second detector and first autoformer. The same condenser and gridleak values should

"In operating this amplifier with a Best's Super, the potentiometer should be set for maximum gain, using the volume control in the intermediate stages only. In this way better quality and clarity of tone is available with a minimum amount of amplified noise. This reason is logical when it is proven that the intermediate stages using 199-type tubes give a maximum gain of 36 miles, which would overload any detector'

REBUILDING ROAD ACROSS GRAMPIANS

EDINBURGH, March 16 (Special Correspondence)—The Great North Road across the Grampians is being reconstructed under the Govern-ment's £600,000 scheme. About 1000 men are employed, and the work is divided into seven sections, under the direction of Major Bruce as resi-dent engineer. The work undertaken stretches from Blair Atholl to Inver-

Part of this intersects the old road Part of this intersects the old road north, made by General Wade, after the rebellion in 1745, and at this point is 1500 feet above sea level. This one section alone includes the reconstruction of nine bridges. The Duke of Atholl is very interested in the work and has been generous in granting special facilities in the way of land required for deviations and otherwise.

At the very best, the effort to fund the debts owing to the United States by its associates in the World War is bound to lead to complications, recriminations, hard feeling. Any effort to temper the exactions of the creditor with concessions based on international brotherliness will be sneered at as pharisaical, while unless the full rigor of the claim is thus abated, the United States will be depicted as coldly avaricious. Great Britain, through a section of its press, is now denouncing as unfair the American concessions to Italy; and

There are inevitable complications, incident to the position of the United States as a world creditor. How serious they may become will not be known until actual debt-paying has succeeded to the present activity, which is merely that of collating and systematizing promises to pay. The true problem of the war debts is likely to become more pressing ten or twenty years from now, than it is today, for each of the debtors has so arranged the scale of payment that the burden will fall most lightly while the present political generation remains in power.

France, whose debt is yet to be funded, will no doubt find in those concessions reasons for demanding equally liberal terms for herself.

In his very able speech supporting the plan for funding the Italian debt, Senator Smoot set forth a doctrine which is likely to rise up to harass the United States in many places and at many times. Seeking to forestall the attack which will be made upon this settlement as directly advantageous to Mussolini's warlike and imperialistic plans, Senator Smoot said:

We are not concerned with Italy's internal or European politics. Mr. Mussolini's aspirations for the Italian people have nothing to do with the question we are called upon to decide. We are concerned solely with a business problem—an international business question.

Do not be led afield by fervent criticisms attacking Mr. Mussolini, the Fascisti, and their policies. It is my earnest hope that there will be no Senator who is so failing in his appreciation of the proper attitude toward another government that he will permit himself to attack on the floor of the Senate its policies and activities which in no

This sounds well. Standing alone, it seems almost unanswerable. But the danger that lurks in such a doctrine will be instantly discerned if we substitute for Italy, as the Nation seeking adjustment, Russia.

The Union of Soviet Republics, like Italy and other European states, is heavily indebted to the United States. Its spokesmen have repeatedly stated that their Government is willing to discuss the settlement of these debts, but thus far the State Department has refused to recognize the Russian Government, even for the purpose of such a parley. Whether Russia or Italy today constitutes the greater menace to the peace of Europe is a question on which eminent students of international conditions differ. One thing is very certain, and that is that any question of funding the Russian debt would never get through the Senate without a very lively discussion of the debtor's internal politics, which, in the case of Italy, Senator Smoot deplores

Perhaps this may be regarded as an extreme case-although Russia's overthrow of established institutions in behalf of communism is little more extreme then Italy's revolutionary defense of capitalism. But there is another case very much in point. The United States solemnly agreed to lend Greece $50,000,000. Greece complied with the stated conditions and received a little more than one-third of the loan.

The return of King Constantine to temporary power blocked for a time the fulfillment of the agreement, and ever since the turbulent condition of Greek politics has furnished the chief obstacle to its completion. Here, as in the case of Russia, internal politics in the debtor nation stands in the way of agreement. The Greek commission in Washington a few weeks ago failed to effect a settlement, and beyond doubt, when the effort shall be renewed, the instability of Greek governments, and the doubtful permanence of the present dictatorship will be looked upon by the American negotiators as vital factors in the problem.

Senator Smoot has enunciated an indefensible doctrine. Even in the case under consideration by the Senate, it is eminently proper that the governmental ideals of the nation seeking valuable concessions should be given consideration. It must be borne in mind that, in this instance, concessions on the debt to the United States Government was the lesser part of what Italy was seeking. What was chiefly wanted was a settlement with Washington, so that more money might be borrowed in Wall Street. That has been done, and $100,000,000 in Italian bonds is in the hands of the American bankers. How far this very generous credit is responsible for the arrogant and intransigent attitude of Italy today may be worth consideration.

Nothing, as Senator Smoot points out, can be of more value to the United States than a Europe restored to prosperity, her people busy, her trade active. Whether the United States, with its command of capital, can best contribute to the attainment of this condition by opening huge credits to nations that boast of their warlike purposes is quite another question.

Any effort to appraise what has, in some quarters, been regarded as the assertive attitude of the Mexican Government in declaring its unquestioned right to nationalize that country's schools, would be misdirected were it to fall to take into consideration the progress which has been made in establishing popular education and enlarging the scope of its institutions under state control. In an address delivered in New York recently, Dr. Casaurane, who is Secretary of Public Educa-tion in Mexico, said that in Mexico City alone the schools supported at public expense are car-ing for 20,000 more children than a year ago. This, he insisted, answers the claim of propagan-dists that the schools have been closed and thousands of children left without opportunity to gain an education.

But even more gratifying and more significant than this is the showing, made by the same authority, that during the last fifteen months 2100 new rural schools have been established, bringing the total to 3000, attended by 200,000 children of native Indian parents. "Each person educated in Mexico," the speaker declared, "is another customer for American business. In their present uneducated state they have neither the resources nor the intelligence to buy American goods." When it is stated that there are now 1,200,000 boys and girls in Mexico's schools, and that the number is constantly growing, the significance of the movement, even in its commercial bearing, which is of the least importance, must be recognized.

There are indications that Mexico, by its own methods, is gradually solving some of its more difficult problems. Its millions of illiterates have been recognized as a serious liability even to the country itself. It may have been realized also that the methods prevailing in some of the schools have not accorded with the purposes of education as the more progressive people of Mexico have come to regard such purposes. It has not always been possible to convince even the illiterate and underprivileged classes in the rural communities of Mexico that the opportunities offered would prove of practical benefit. Therefore the task of the state educators now is, first of all, to show to the backward parents of native children the privilege which has been made available for them under the newer and better order.

It should not be necessary to advise caution when it is proposed to take any step which will indicate a wrong interpretation of Mexico's ambition to elevate the standards of its citizenship. It has been proposed in Congress that the United States withdraw its official recognition of Mexico because of the closing of certain of that country's schools. The showing would not seem to justify any such precipitate action.

the title of the Window Seat has this to say about prohibition polls and liquor ballots:

I have two acquaintances, here in Washington, one of whom is a friend. Both are sober men. The one is wet; he is fat and lazy, sleeps late in the morning, looks for "easy" jobs, borrows money from his friends, and instead of trying to pay it back, lies about them; (I know) he has been busy cutting out the vote coupons from all the papers he could get his hands on, and gets them signed up for wine and beer and against prohibition by all sorts of people, young and old; these votes are counted to show the overwhelming sentiment against. The other one, my friend, is a Christian gentleman, up early and a hard worker, pays his debts and with a smile, is the head of a large and devoted family, all of whom are voters except one and all of whom are dry and for prohibition and against wines and beer; not one of them has voted, because they think these polls are wet propaganda and they take no interest.

I have been approached by two people to vote, both wet. A couple of my friends were approached by a paid agent of the League Against Prohibition, or some such name. I have spoken to a number of people about their voting. and the remarkable thing to me is, I haven't spoken to a single wet who hasn't voted, nor to a single dry who has. Therefore, these newspaper polls don't spell much

We emphatically believe that if each individual citizen of these United States would apply his personal experience and his own judgment to the prohibition issue, holding his mind rigidly closed to newspaper noise, political propaganda and congressional clamor, the question would be settled sensibly and settled right.

The calendar hasn't much to do with it, after all. Lingering snow-flurries may whiten the ground, and a bleak breath may sweep down from somewhere in the north country, but there remain, nevertheless, unmistakable indication's that the earth is awakening from its annual hibernation. In the Gulf

States and the great southwestern regions of the United States the new season is already established. The market places to which trains laden with the early fruits of the garden are dispatched daily offer convincing proof that the great change has taken place. But to the northerner the transformation seems slow. He seeks some visible proof that he is to be made, and that right soon, an independent beneficiary of the new or re-established order.

Asparagus, artichokes, and even strawberries, the constant evidences of spring's return, fail to satisfy the hungry longing which returns when the sap begins to move in the maples and poplars. Not until the brooks and lakes divest themselves of the last remnant of their winter coverings, and the smooth surface of the water is broken, here and there, by predatory trout seeking their first taste of the season's carelessly spread bounty, will the experimental gardener, reminded of his firm resolve, go forth to conquer the wilderness of the brown and sere back lot. But temptation awaits him even when thus engaged. The passing years, he finds, have not rendered him invulnerable to the lure of the fishing hole hidden away in an alder copse at the bend of the brook just below the riffles. The first shovelful of earth turned in the new undertaking supplies the silent yet wiggly connecting link between duty and what appears as alluring

Unless determination and firm purpose are enthroned, drab toil soon palls. Gone are the visions, supplied by highly colored seed catalogues, of early radishes, cucumbers and spinach. Do not the markets afford all these; and more, as well as asparagus and artichokes? But where, the yielding devotee asks, can one buy the contentment and joy which the woods and brooks supply freely? There is not such freedom anywhere else. Those who have never found it and experienced it cannot expect to qualify as character witnesses against the man or boy who, having once tasted it, forgets even a pleasant task to enjoy it again.

Sometimes, and usually at this very season, one becomes easily convinced that vacation time in the way

should begin in April. The routine of study and application to duties cheerfully performed becomes irksome as the sun each morning lengthens the daylight period. One concludes, perhaps, that there is a logical explanation for the proverbial placidity and tractability of the dwellers in frigid sections of the Arctic, as well as for the restiveness of the denizens of the tropics. Revolutionary mutterings punctuate the soliloquy of the follower of the beaten path. It is in the air. The desire is for change. It is not an ungenerous observation, viewing the average boy or man at this transition period, to believe that he, like the proverbial Indian, if obliged to work, would a little rather hunt.

At first, the question that Americans asked was, how to get a thrill out of opera music. They arrived at an answer clearly, according to abundant testimony, both oral and written, in the period, roughly, from 1885 to 1900, which may be called that of the great singers. Next, the question arose, how they could get a thrill out of symphony music. They accomplished this quest in the period, again roughly, between the years 1900 to 1925, which may be called that of the great conductors. At present, the question which piques their curiosity is, how they may get a thrill out of quartet music. For the third time, answer seems forthcoming, and in a period quite near, which may be called that of the great ensemble interpreters.

Not but that opera performance reached remarkable heights now and then in the earlier decades, and symphony performance in the later ones, of the nineteenth century; not but that quartet performance, likewise, has often been brilliant in the course of the twentieth century, as far as counted off. Still, the grand thrill of such things undoubtedly demands long preparation, and the day of the quartet in the United States can hardly be described as farther along than at the dawning.

Definition of the word, American, necessarily affects the case. For, strictly speaking, American opera performance has always been Italian, German or French; while American symphony performance has been mixed German, French, Italian, Russian and much else. But the proof of music is in the listening. The keenest opera audiences were indisputably those of from thirty to forty years ago; the most penetrating symphony audiences have been those of the last twenty-five years; whereas really independent and shrewdly discerning quartet audiences are scarcely yet developed.

Formerly, American quartets were recruited from orchestras. A concertmaster broke away from submission to the baton, got another violinist, a viola player and a violoncellist to join him, and went on the concert circuit presenting the chamber music classics. Immeasurable good resulted, but truly, no remarkable thrill. Today, artists who have made the acquaintance of the American listener as solo players and have discovered in him a desire for a higher emotional experience than can be had from the Mendelssohn concerto for violin, the orchestral episode of Berlioz with the solo viola part, or the Haydn concerto for violoncello in D, are beginning to institute quartets.

Noteworthily, Mischa Elman drops a large portion of his business, if that is proper to say, as virtuoso, and assembles a group of four to offer Beethoven, opus 59, Nos. 1, 2 and 3; Brahms, opus 51, Nos. 1 and 2, and other things of like significance to the consideration of the musical public. Mr. Elman's renown as a solo violinist by no means assures the outcome. His known temperament as an interpreter, however, indicates the purpose; which is, to give Americans a long-expected, and perhaps overdue, go by tram, preferably a tram with seats running parallel to the pavement. If you are so fortunate as to find one of these, to get the most thrill out of your trip be careful to sit on the right-hand side.

I could not call it the most comfortable means of getting there, for it is a long journey, taking about an hour. Neither does the major portion of the route offer any spe-cial points of interest. There is one outstanding sight which you would see, and one which was reserved for me alone. Shall we take that first?

We were going along the canal bordered with a row of wonderful trees which Abd-el-Hamid tells me are banyan trees. The trunks are almost hidden beneath a defense of boughs or shoots which have grown downward to the ground in such numbers that they resemble a cave of stalactites or some compressed Gothic cathedral.

Through an avenue of these I suddenly saw spread out to dry along the vivid green farther bank of the canal, yards and yards of washing of a most wonderful mauve, reminding me of the Mitcham lavender beds. So charmed was I with the sight that I hardly noticed the goal of our trip in the distance; besides, I had already seen a similar view of the Pyramids the previous night under much better conditions when they were shrouded in the tawny cloak of

The other redeeming feature of the journey was the crossing the Abbas II bridge. As a bridge, Cairo can show better efforts, but from them one does not see the Nile wandering between an expanse of mud flats like the Loire at Tours.

The gray waters of the river, the white sails of the feluceas, the gray-and-white clouds, as if escaped from a painting by Sisley, admiring themselves in the brown mud, all made a picture not easily to be forgotten. But although it was very nice in its way, Abbas bridge was not what we had met at such an early hour to see, and our response to its meaner beauties was not as enthusiastic as it might have been on a more ordinary occasion. It was perhaps twenty minutes later, and I was pensively contemplating the depressing flatness which is the Nile valley and the grayish yellow sand hills standing guard over the desert, mottled with purple shadows from passing clouds, when I was aroused by that general move-

Quite by chance I looked out of the left-hand window, and was amply rewarded for the dullness and the length of our journey. I saw bounding the bright clover green of the Mena golf links a cliff of sand, and on top of that another cliff of stone towering up into the sky and entirely dwarfing a swarm of minute human beings promenading about its base. That is why I recommend the right side of the tram.

After that, if I had been forewarned, I should have shut my eyes tight and kept a firm clutch of Abd-el-Hamid's hand; and that is what I beseech you to do when you go, for the descent from the tram brings one back again to earth with a heavy thud. The tram station is surrounded by dragomans in countless hordes, who with camels and donkeys or their own unaided eloquence to recommend them, swarm around one like bargain hunters around a

As we were there a motor arrived with a small party which in an instant was beleaguered by no less than twenty of them. Forcing our way through their ranks and passing a tea garden and a photographer's place (Bedouin costumes can be supplied to ladies and gentlemen, you will be glad to know) and a shop to buy post cards, and a garage (really one might just as well be going onto Brighton Pier), we came, still harassed by guides, to a long sloping road down which motorists were scorching. When this also had been surmounted, we had arrived.

At first I was disappointed, not by the Pyramids themselves, but by their surroundings. There is a sandy piece of ground with bits of paper and orange peel blowing at one of the seven wonders of the world.

Most decidedly the best way to see the Pyramids is to | about on it, and motorcars parked, and policemen, and small boys kicking a football about, and trippers, and a light railway for the excavations which are constantly going on.

It is all so crude and prosaic that for a moment one's heart sinks, but only for a moment, for when one gets beyond that and comes to the Pyramids themselves a well again. The photographs on which we have all been brought up from infancy incline us to look upon them as old friends, but they are old friends, like Bottom the weaver, most strangely translated.

Instead of the triangle sticking up behind a man on a praying rug and a camel to which we are used, there is a mighty cliff pointing to the clouds and the intense sky, while tiny ants run hither and thither about its base. A few feet from the ground a crowd of insignificant specks turns out to be a party of tourists going to visit the inside: the official entrance, which completely dwarfs them, spreads its great triangle fifty feet above their heads. We turn aside and begin to walk round, feeling rather as the soldiers of Israel must have felt parading round the walls of Jericho.

To cheer ourselves up we start repeating a few statistics and trying to remember some of those diagrams in which one is shown the comparative heights of the Pyramids and St. Paul's Cathedral or the Nelson Column. How do they go? Height 481 feet, length 775 feet, 2,300,000 blocks of stone averaging 21/2 tons in weight. Then we look up to see how high 481 feet really is, and at once forget all the statistics. It is as if, standing at the foot of some cliff and looking up, all the laws of perspective had suddenly gone wrong.

The color is yellow, like cliffs; the surface is uneven. like cliffs; we are walking on sand as if on the beach; there is even at the top a post which might be the flagstaff of a coast-guard station, but instead of the cliff having a top running parallel to the ground, it tapers to a blunt point. The impression of being at the seaside is further heightened by the masses of rock which lie all about the base, detritus from the casing of the monument which took 20,000 men twenty years to build, and by the excavations to our right which look like rocks at low tide.

On our right the dun excavations, on our left the monstrous thing a wonderful golden honey color in the sun, ahead of us the smaller but still impressive mass of the second Pyramid of Khafra, purple in the shadow, its limestone top glittering dully in the glare of the sun as if growing weary after its 4000 years of scorching. 4 4 4

Some distance away from the present corner of the Great Pyramid is a small space cleared of sand showing where the sides used originally to come to. On this side away from the main entrance it was very quiet. We started climbing up the side, but as it was very hot work and not very good going (the blocks of stone are about three feet six inches high, not in theory a difficult height but in practice and in large quantities a rather tiring one), we stopped about twenty feet up, sat down and gave ourselves up to meditation.

What Abd-el-Hamid thought about I don't know. I thought of all sorts of things: of the complex structure of temples and causeways which used to spread its net about the base of the Pyramid, itself only a detail of a great and proud ensemble; of the smaller efforts of the court noblemen at our feet, and of the captive Crusaders who were forced to pull them down to provide material for the new citadel of Saladin; of the desire for gold of Sultan Al Ma'moun, who, hoping to find some in the Pyramids, pulled off their casing.

I was awakened from my reverie by piercing screams. Some boys from a government school were spending their time going for rides on the gorgeously caparisoned camels which take the place of donkeys at this resort, and their enjoyment, unlike mine, was quite unaffected by the thought of the 20,000 men toiling under their overseers at the bidding of King Cheops, who all unknowing worked at one of the seven wonders of the world.

The Week in New York

The dual nature of an ordinarily stable commodity on its entry into the world of commerce and finance appeared a court suit here this week, when a large st Sugar was found to be very much in the way, and yet so evanescent that it could not be moved. More than 4000 tons of it had been kept on two city piers by a warehouse company, until Justice Lydon of the Suprema Court was asked to apply the law requiring it to be taken away. As he was issuing the order, however, the president of the warehouse company interposed with the unusual answer that the owners were changing so fast he did not know at any one time whose it was. It consists of 188 lots, and the paper representing ownership of it is being passed from buyer to buyer in the daily trading on the Sugar Exchange. The difficulties were so obvious that the court allowed the company until Sept. 1 to get it all unloaded on whoever was available in the long procession of owners.

The waste plateaus atop many of New York's tall buildings, of which the inhabitants of the metropolis have lately begun the conquest, have had a new function proposed for them by the Women's League for the Protection of Riverside Park. Their far-seeing and motherly eye having discerned something approaching a skyscraper in the distant offing in the part of upper Manhattan which they guard, they have already begun the campaign to secure the great open space on its prospective roof for a public playground. The New York Central Railroad, freight tracks along the riverside are to be covered over to extend the present parkway, is planning a freight warehouse six or eight stories high, 150 feet wide, and covering the blocks from 129th to 135th Streets; and though it is still only in the realm of future probability, the women have set out far enough ahead to shape both its roof and its destiny.

The celebration this week of the opening of a new stretch of subway on the line from Queensboro into the heart of Manhattan showed the size the city's transportation problem takes in the public thought. With the arrival of a special seven-car train bearing some 300 officials of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and public organizations of Queens at the new station on Forty-second Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues, bells and whistles were sounded, and city officials, presidents of the boroughs and representatives of the public transportation bodies joined in the speeches, predicting great benefits for the city. The festivities continued into the evening, with a banquet, and motion pictures showing how the city had grown up with its transportation facilities, and the many miles of tracks over which a citizen could ride. The celebration, in fact, could hardly have been more enthusiastic if a whole new line had been inauguthree blocks long. rated, though this particular stretch of track was only

A financing program to put the School of Retailing of New York University on a permanent footing was begun at a banquet held by the school and attended by many of the leading merchants of the city this week. After winning its way in six years from an enrollment of twentyeight students, with five courses offered, to an enrollment of 908 students, with forty courses offered, the school has established itself in the confidence of the merchants to such an extent that they are ready to undertake the raising of $500,000 as a start toward securing for it a separate building. Many of the heads of retail houses have already been contributing to its support from year to year, but it is sought to end the present indefinite arrangement by establishing a $1,000,000 foundation by 1928. With many of the school's graduates already in the offices of the companies that have financed the project thus far, on in offices where the sentiment had previously been skeptical,

"Liquor and the Newspapers"

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: Permit me to compliment you on your recent editorial, "Liquor and the Newspapers." The indictment of the Manufacturers Record is a sound one, and did not strike me at all as any "inaccurate and unfair charge against the daily press of the United States."

As a student of journalism, which includes daily newspaper work, I have watched with interest the reaction of readers to the recent newspaper poll on prohibition. I believe a number of newspapers with a wide influence have been guilty of playing into the hands of the antiprohibitionists in conducting this poll.

Your own statement that the wets are fighting the aw "because it is being enforced" is in entire accord with the specious arguments advanced by the wets who are sufficiently aroused to enter their straw votes for modification or repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. "A cricket caught in a fence can make more noise than a herd of cattle grazing on a hillside," runs an old saw that sums up the situation quite accurately.

The calm and sane presentation of the facts showing that enforcement is becoming more effective, which you advance, is the most valuable comment on the situation of today. It is a large service not only to the public that you do, but to those newspaper men who would meet the situation with independence and with some recognition of the power of the public press.

"Certainly," says a political wet, "another national ref-erendum would result in a victory for the drys, for many liquor men would vote dry to continue their illicit earnings," a statement which is both a confession of lawbreaking and an alibi that evades facing the fact that the majority of American citizens favor prohibition because it has proven a benefit to the Nation.

But of the challenge to newspaper men, which you advance, we must not let it drop! Behind the indictment of the Baltimore Observer against the newspapers, lies a long series of events that combine to rob the press of its one-time power, and change it to a mercenary syndicate. We are developing editors who feel that the day of frank, critical and responsible editorials in journalism is passing, and who become easy marks for the pseudo-policy of giving the public what it wants.

To be told that the "crime wave" exists largely in our newspapers, that law violations are made to appear twice the number that they really are by the prevalence of sensational news, would not flatter our newspaper editors, vet should serve to open their eves. To tell them that modern methods in journalism have aided in building up "chain-store" newspapers, would be equally unpleasant, but one cannot but lament the newer changes that "ease' the editor's work, and thereby weaken his influence.

To one who watches these changes, it appears certain that the future will bring us an increasing number of newspaper editors who refuse to be duped by cates," and who will extend the influence of the too-slow supporters of law enforcement, right, educational and constructive journalism. In throwing down the challenge that you do, there appears to me a double service—that to the public, and that to newspaper editors.
